Tips and Reminders for Advisors

Reminder: As a teacher working with students, please be sure to create your BIG Idea Advisor account. Create your account at <http://contest.bigideasd.com/login?type=advisor> . Check your advisor dashboard for resources and to track the progress of your students.

The information below includes:

- Tips for students developing their entry and using the website
- Tips for advisors and awards for teachers

Here are a few tips for your students for developing their entry:

1. When brainstorming business ideas, encourage students to think of solutions to problems in their community, state, nation, or world.
2. Activities designed by Jim Hart are helpful in developing an idea and can be found at www.BIGideaSD.com on the Rules Page: Tips to Create Your Business Idea.
3. Encourage students to view the How To Videos on the BIG Idea YouTube Channel.
4. Encourage students to use the Resource page to link to statistics and tips for completing their entry.
5. Encourage students to talk to business owners (in their industry if possible) to learn more about business operations, industry concerns, and customer characteristics.
6. Encourage students to consider what industry their business idea falls under; they will be asked this in the student entry form.
7. Make sure students address the questions in each section as specifically as possible and use as many words as allowed.

8. The Marketing Design portion of the competition is optional and consists of submitting a full page advertisement for their idea.
9. The Marketing Design competition is judged on how well the advertisement promotes and relates to the business, not just on the artwork. Original work is always better than clipart.
10. If the business idea fits into a Wellness Category, students should select that category to submit their entry which will be judged by Sanford Health.
11. If the business idea fits into a Food Animal Agriculture Category, students should select that category which will be judged by Midwest Ag Supply.
12. If the business idea fits into an Agriculture Innovation Category, students should select that category which will be judged by the South Dakota Agriculture Foundation.
13. Remember to remind your students to agree to the plagiarism agreement before they submit their entries. BIG Idea reserves the right to disqualify any entry where plagiarism has been found.

Here are a few tips for your students for using the entry website:

1. For students working in a group, only one student needs to create an account. The names of the second and third team members will be entered as the student creates the profile for the account.
2. If work is cut and pasted into the entry form, be sure to enter a space to activate the word count.
3. Plagiarized work will be subject to disqualification from the competition.
4. Final submission means NO changes can be made.
5. The Marketing Design Competition file must be submitted when the rest of the entry is submitted. It cannot be added after the student has submitted their entry.
6. Be sure students use proper grammar and correct spelling; it is worth 50 points!

Here are a few tips for you as the Advisor:

1. It is best if you can create your Advisor account before the students create their account, then your name will be available to them when they set up their account and choose their school.
2. This year we have put in a new framework for the login page and past advisor accounts were not carried over. Therefore, each advisor must create a NEW account.
3. Use your Advisor Dashboard to see that all students have created an account and have selected you as their Advisor. You will not see students if they have created an account but not chosen you as their Advisor in their profile.
4. Use your Advisor Dashboard to track student progress. You can see their entry in progress or upon submission from the Projects tab.
5. If any duplicate student accounts or projects have been created, please let us know.
6. Use your Advisor Dashboard to track project submissions. On the Project tab, check to see that all entries have a status of Submitted, not Draft. You can also verify the Marketing Design submissions.
